Kenney Resigns as Secretary Treasurer of Town Council

Coun. Coleman Sworn in to Office; Position to be Advertised.

This is the official record of proceedings of the council of the Town of Wainwright at its Special Meeting in the council chamber on Monday, the 23rd day of August, A.D. 1943 at 8 o'clock p.m.

The members of council present at this meeting were Mayor Middlemas and Councillors Cork, Robinson, Stafford, Tory, and Councillor-elect Coleman.

The Secretary-Treasurer vouched that the newly elected Councillor had subscribed to the required declaration, when the newly elected Councillor was permitted to assume his place at the council table and was appointed to fill Councillor Alderman's resigned place on the standing committees of council.

The resignation of the Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. G. W. Kenney, was placed before council and, on motion by Councillor Cork, the resignation, effective October 31st, 1943, was accepted, and instructions given that the position be advertised in the Wainwright Star and the Edmonton Journal, that the salary offered be $150 per month and that applicants be requested to have their applications in the hands of the Secretary-Treasurer on or before the 14th day of September A.D. 1943.

C.C.F. Policy Outlined By Provincial Leader

A large and attentive audience gathered in the I.O.O.F. Hall on Friday night last to hear Mr. Elmer E. Roper, M.L.A., Provincial Leader of the C.C.F., outline the political and economic philosophy of that Party as it would apply in Provincial and Federal affairs. Mr. Stillwell, President of the Wainwright Local of the C.C.F., was Chairman of the meeting.

In his address, Mr. Roper reviewed the last session of the Provincial Legislature indicating with suggestive criticisms where C.C.F. principles would have dictated a different course of action from that pursued by the present government. The speaker dealt in considerable detail with the fact that private interests are being allowed to reap large profits from Alberta's natural resources, such as Turner Valley oil, when the benefits accruing from the exploitation of these resources should return to all the people of the province. Mr. Roper condemned roundly the Government's waste of taxpayers' money in continuing its Treasury Branches. Turning to Federal affairs, Mr. Roper explained in detail how a C.C.F. government in power at Ottawa would gradually take over control of those industries and institutions in which a few men, through the control and manipulation of the means of production are in a position to exploit the people of Canada for their own profit and with a consequent lowering of the standard of living of the people as a whole.

Turning to the question of the period of threatening unemployment which we are warned will follow the war, Mr. Roper argued the defensibility of the simple statement that the cure for unemployment is employment. Taking present wartime production as his analogy, the speaker showed how the producing of the basic necessities of peace could, under intelligent planning, take the place of the planned production of war materials. In this connection Mr. Roper outlined the part that would be played by the nationalized banking system. "Whatever is physically possible is financially possible," was his contention.

Mr. Henry Spencer opened the meeting with a short address on C.C.F. policy with regard to Education and Health.

Mr. Roper was introduced by Mr. M. D. Meade of Wainwright.

Pretty Service For Military Wedd. Bells

A quiet wedding was solemnized on August 12th at the Sacred Heart church of this parish, for Mary Cook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cook of Ingersoll, Ont., who was united in matrimony to Pte. Ray Leo Simms of Sarnia, Ont.

The bride was attractively attired in a floor length gown of white brocade satin, with a long veil and a Mary, Queen of Scots head-dress. She carried a bouquet of red and white American roses. The bride was attended by Mrs. D. J. Ferguson who was attired in a floor-length gown of pastel blue net with matching head-dress, and carried pink and white carnations.

Lance Corporal D. J. Ferguson of Chatham, Ont., attended the groom. A buffet luncheon, with appointments of white, was served after the ceremony at the home of Mrs. Fred Lowe, with friends of the Regiment present. Many beautiful gifts were received.

The happy young couple will reside temporarily at Wainwright.

Epidemic of Polio Feared In States

Chicago—The Journal of the American Medical Association states that infantile paralysis "has reached almost epidemic proportions" in some parts of the United States.

"Indications are that this will be the worst year for this disease since 1940, when 9,770 cases were recorded," the publication said. "Through August 7, nearly 3,000 cases have been reported."

California, Texas, Oklahoma and Connecticut appear to be the most seriously affected states.

A health officer said the 89 new cases of infantile paralysis reported in Kansas last week indicate the state is faced with its worst outbreak of the disease in history.

The first case of poliomyelitis in Calgary this year has been reported to the civil health department by the R.C.A.F. The patient is a medical officer who is now in the R.C.A. isolation hospital and reported to be "responding nicely to treatment."

Coleman Elected To Town Council Seat

In the polling in town on Thursday last for the Council seat rendered vacant by the recent resignation of Mr. J. Alderman, Mr. William Carman Coleman was successful over his opponent, Mr. Ernest Chas. Symes, by the close margin of two votes.

The final result of the polling of some 137 electors was as follows:
Coleman, W. C. 69
Symes, E. C. 67
Spoilt ballot 1

Total poll 137
The new councillor will thus take office for the balance of the period for which the seat was previously filled, and which period expires at the end of January, 1946.

New Classes Called To The Armed Forces

Humphrey Mitchell, Minister of Labour, announced the call to military training of married men, ages 27 to 30 inclusive, and of all men who reach the age of eighteen this year.

This call, Mr. Mitchell stated, is pursuant to a decision reached by the Cabinet Council. As in previous calls, those in the classes mentioned will be required to present themselves for examination and, if found fit and accepted, they will train and serve in the Armed Forces in Canada and her territorial waters.

Arthur MacNamara, Director of National Selective Service, stated these "Orders-Medical" to the men covered by the Minister's announcement will be mailed as rapidly as possible from the offices of the Registrars in the thirteen Mobilization Divisions.

The Council is advertising for applications for the post of Town Secretary, which has to be filled by November 1st next.

Householders Urged Must Save Coal

Ottawa—Munitions minister Howe appeals to householders and other coal consumers who have their year's supply on hand to practise the same conservation methods as those who must still obtain their coal.

"No one can safely predict the degree of severity of the forthcoming winter," he said. "Nor can anyone make any accurate estimate of our coal supplies for the winter of 1944-45. I think it best to take no chances—to save every possible shovelful."

"Those who conserve might have some coal left over which might help greatly in the following winter."

Insurance Amendments Effective Sept. 1st.

Ottawa, Aug. 21—Labor Minister Mitchell announced last night that amendments to the unemployment insurance act approved at the 1943 session of parliament will become effective Sept. 1.

Under one amendment, all persons now employed in work previously insurable under the act will have to be covered regardless of the amount of their earnings, so long as they are engaged on an hourly, daily, weekly or piece-work rate, including a mileage rate. This means that except for employees engaged on a monthly or annual salary basis, the wage ceiling previously exempting employees earning above $2,000 annually will be abolished.

In the case of employees engaged on a monthly or annual salary basis, coverage will be limited to those whose total earnings do not exceed $2,400 a year.

In the case of employees whose earnings are more than $2,400 a year distinction as to whether they are insurable or not depends upon the period of time of the contract of employment, said Mr. Mitchell.

Local Young Bride Married in Edmonton

On Monday, August 16th, a quiet wedding was celebrated in Wesley United church, Edmonton, when Miss Lillian Beesie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hans Pfleger became the bride of Sgt. Arthur Martin Daniels, R.C.A.F., son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniels. Both the contracting parties were former residents of the Greenhills district.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. D. Richard, pastor of Wainwright United church.

The bride was attired in white Silk Jersey with matching accessories. Her corsage bouquet held red roses and ferns. Miss S. Dreger, of Edmonton wore a costume of dusty rose crepe, with yellow roses and ferns for her flowers. Mr. R. Moore of Edmonton cousin of the groom acted as best man.

The young couple are spending a few days at the home of their parents here before journeying to Vancouver, where they plan to reside in future.

Independents Organize And Appoint Officers

At a recent meeting of the Independent Association of Alberta, officers were elected to carry on until the next Provincial Convention is held. J. Percy Page, M.L.A., Edmonton, was made Chairman with James Walker, M.L.A., Raymond, as Vice-Chairman, and Mayor Andrew Davidson, M.L.A., Calgary, as Secretary-Treasurer.

The Province was divided in two for the Executive Committee, with Southern Alberta representatives as follows: Roy Edmondson, Calgary; Ernest Bennion, Picture Butte; Matthew H. Waldron, Okotoks; A. Davidson, M.L.A., Calgary; E. J. Chambers K.C., Calgary; J. J. Bowlen, M.L.A., Calgary; and James Walker, M.L.A., Raymond.

The Northern Alberta Division of the Executive consists of the following: W. K. Porter, Edmonton; George MacLachlan, M.L.A., Cloyde; H. J. Macdonald, M.L.A., Edmonton; Jas. Bentley, Horse Hills; Percy Herring, Edmonton; E. J. Martin, M.L.A., Fairview; W. N. Chant, Camrose.

In addition to which will be the Independent Members of the House and all defeated Independent candidates of Ex-officio members. The Executive is also setting up working committees on program, publicity, finance and organization. It is planned that the Provincial Convention will be held some time in November.

Tea, Coffee Ration Increased One-Third

Tea and coffee ration to consumers will be increased one-third, effective September 2. The War-time Prices and Trade Board announces that in line with its policy of making maximum amounts of any rationed commodity available this increase is allowed, and that the ration will be further increased at any time when the supply position permits. It is felt that if ocean shipping conditions continue to enlarge the supply, another increase in this ration will be made before the end of the year.

The increase becomes effective with the use of tea and coffee coupons from the new rationbook. The present value of the coupons will remain the same, each being worth two ounces of tea or eight ounces of coffee. The increase will be accomplished by having two coupons become valid every three weeks instead of every four weeks as at present.

Tea and coffee coupons in ration book 3 will not show the valid dates, but these dates will be announced from time to time by the Board. The first coupons of the new book become valid September 2.

Dealers Report No Binder Twine Shortage

There will be no shortage of binder twine to "tie the crop," according to dealers' reports and the prices will remain the same as 1942, it was learned Monday.

Some shipments from the east have been slow in arriving due to war time transportation difficulties, but because of the late harvest this is not expected to cause any hardship. Farmers began buying twine in August and sales are continuing steadily and expected to continue through September as some farmers delay buying until the crop is ripe.

The new stock comes only in 500 grade, and being made of stock with fewer long strands, is said to be slightly heavier and calls for slight adjustment on binders.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to express my sincere appreciation to all my supporters at the poll on Thursday last.

It will be my earnest endeavor to fulfill faithfully the duties to which I have been elected.

Jams, Marmalade, Jellies and Honey Stocks to be Rationed

OTTAWA—The Canadian Prices Board announced Sunday night that rationing of honey, jams, jellies and marmalades will go into effect Thursday, Sept. 2, and ordered suspension until the opening of business Sept. 2 of all sales or deliveries of those commodities to consumers.

The announcement said details of the rationing plan will be announced within a week.

The suspension order means that no further sales of these commodities or deliveries on orders already accepted, may be made to householders, hotels, restaurants, institutions, industrial users, or others who buy these commodities for consumption. Hotels, restaurants, eating places and institutions which normally serve these commodities to their customers may continue to do so, but may not buy or accept delivery of supplies during the suspension period.

The only sales now permitted are those to wholesalers and retailers, or other persons who buy for resale. After Sept. 2 these sales will be governed by the new rationing plan.

No Increase In Ammunition Given

Ottawa—"The supply of small arms ammunition for civilian use cannot possibly be increased without seriously jeopardizing dynamic war production," War-time Prices and Trade Board officials state in answer to pleas for more liberal distribution from dealers and individual users.

Present demand has eclipsed the 1939 figures by over 50 percent. The Board emphasized its decision to allocate its supplies strictly to essential users.

Essential users, according to the Board order are penitentiary guards, bank messengers, war plant guards, trappers, and those in remote areas whose livelihood depends on getting ammunition.

Second Cup of Coffee In Cates Likely

Ottawa—Restaurant patrons may shortly be allowed a second cup of tea or coffee, it was unofficially disclosed.

A review of the present regulations permitting only one cup to a customer is being undertaken by the war-time prices and trade board, it is understood, following the recently announced increase of one third in tea and coffee rations for home consumption.

Bbr. Bill Shaw Jr., R.C.A., is here on a visit to his parents for a short leave.

LAW Betty Shaw, R.C.A.F., is enjoying a furlough from her camp duties, visiting her parents in town.

Extend Limit for Filing Of Tax Returns

Ottawa—Revenue Minister Gibson has announced that penalties for late filing of individual tax returns will not be imposed on those filed on or before Aug. 31.

The date for filing individual returns originally was June 30, instead of Sept. 30 last year, March 31 in 1942 and April 30 in previous years, and Col. Gibson said that many taxpayers were not aware of the change.

Col. Gibson said "this is the first time in the history of the income tax division that the time for filing returns has been extended after the due date." The action was considered advisable due to the unusual circumstances of the present year.

"By changes in the budget, the date for filing individual returns was changed from Sept. 30 to June 30, and many taxpayers were not aware of this change," said the minister.

"Furthermore, with deductions at the source, some taxpayers considered that their tax, having been paid in full, there was no need to file a return.

"All taxable persons are required to file an income tax return. In most cases, the tax paid is, in part, refundable to the taxpayer, but this refundable portion can only be determined after the taxpayer has filed a complete return. Therefore, if a return is not filed, repayment cannot be made.

"This extension which is being granted will enable any individuals who have not yet filed their tax returns for 1942 income to do so before the end of August, without penalty."

Mrs. G. H. Luery, who has been on an extended visit at Courtenay and Vancouver, B.C., stopped off to spend two weeks with Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Brunker and family, and with Mrs. Simmons, who is her sister-in-law. She leaves tonight (Wed.) to return to her home in Stirling, Ont.

WHITE CLOUD

The funeral took place at Ponoka last week of another of our real old-timers, in the person of the late Mr.
John Henry Myer, at the age of 70 years.

He was born in Nebraska, June 1st 1873, and came to Canada in 1894, settling first in the Ponoka district.
Some 36 years ago the family came to this district and have lived here since.

Left to mourn his passing are three sons (Harry, of Taber, Alta.; Lawrence, of Millerville; and Lloyd, of Wainwright) and one daughter (Mrs. Lee Babb, of White Cloud district). There are also 10 grand-children, and to all these relatives we extend sympathies of the whole district.

The late Mr. Myer had been ailing for the past two years, having been bed-ridden for some six months.

HEATH

Mr. Tom Withnell is busy with Municipal "tumbling bug" and tractor repairing roads in the district.

The second hail-storm of this season struck the district Sunday night, causing some damage to crops.

Miss Elsie Ford accompanied Greta Wilkinson on her return trip to the coast and will spend some time visiting there.

The ladies of St. Patrick's church spent Saturday afternoon, kalsomining and cleaning the interior of the church.

Word has been received from the coast that Mrs. McLeod unfortunately slipped and fell, causing small injuries, from which we hope she will soon recover.

Margaret Lost in Black-out Freinds Dodging Bombs

READING, ENG.—Outside my window the birds are making experiments in song; a trifle half-hearted, maybe, for it is still cold. But it means that winter is over—and I, for one, hold my breath till that happens.
The allotment is already losing its disgracefully bedraggled look and one can potter about on it again and resume the battle with the wireworm.
(I think we have super-wireworms on our patch, for they have absorbed our patent exterminator, apparently with great relish, and are getting along nicely.) The Gardening Partner, despite complaints of seasonable rheumatism, has appeared in his cordious again and expressed the usual opinion that things out there are looking worse than ever. In fact, everything is under control.

The Hun, of course, has also started his spring Spite Raids here and there, though what he hopes to accomplish by them I cannot say. Going about as I do, I often hear little stories of these bouts of "frightful-ness," and the thing which strikes me most is the tendency to stress the little human incidents and the touches of humor. Nobody minimises the nasty part, of course, for every casuality means suffering for some group of people, but folk don't dwell on it. The main issue, in such cases, is to give all the help one can; but those other tales are repeated with relish, for we all see that the really important thing in these sudden tragedies is the extent to which we can overcome them, both physically and mentally. After all, that is common sense.

Had To Hurry Home

A woman tells me that just after a recent daylight Spite Raid in the Home Counties—counties in the vicinity of London—a friend of hers met a boy, a youngster of about ten, running along the road as hard as he could jog. There was blood on his face, and one hand was tucked inside his coat. She stopped him, but he protested that he must hurry home.
"Are you badly hurt?" she asked.
The kid shook his head, not seeming to care a hoot about the bleeding of his cheek.

"But your hand is injured, isn't it?" she persisted. At that the boy hugged his jacket still closer, and his eyes shone. "No, I've got a hot shell here!" he said—and hurried on.
Then there was the woman who,
she told me, was shopping in her town when three or four raiders started their work. The effect could not be less than terrifying, naturally, and as she recounted her emotions to me, her Irish voice ran up and down its musical scale. "I just stood still," she said. "For a minute I couldn't move at all. There was a stock still in the middle of the road, with a huge basket of groceries in each hand, and that German thing swooping about just over me head. And I've been through three revolutions and two earthquakes in me time, too
—but there I stood."

"And what happened?" I asked.
"Oh, I moved after a while, of course, and caught a bus. Anyhow, I got home—and with all me groceries."

As I pointed out, that sounded to me like first round to her. What do you think?

An Airman From Ontario

I have had a pleasant surprise: a visit from a young airman from a little Ontario town. We have a mutual friend but had never met before.
However, we soon forgot about all that, and in less than no time we were drinking tea and talking as if we had known each other for years.
Neither of us, I am sure, felt that the other was a "stranger"; he did not really mind that I, having no home of my own, could not offer him much hospitality; and I, on my side, felt no discomfort about it.

We shared what there was in the way of butter ration and rather stale buns, and if the cups happened to be odd—well, the tea was none the worse for that. And, talking of tea, maybe some of you could use a hint or two now that tea has become rather precious to us all. Quite candidly, I don't find trans-Atlantic tea-making up to the English standard, and I think I know why. The secret of success is heat. Personally, I much prefer your teabags to our use of loose tea. They are more economical and less messy, but unless you understand this question of heat, the advantage is lost. So try my tip and you'll notice a great improvement.

First of all, the teapot must be warmed before the tea is put in. Just stand it on one corner of the stove or up-end it near the fire for a few minutes. Make a habit of it as all part of tea-time: it is no trouble at all. A little hot water poured in and then emptied out will do the trick, of course, though most people agree that a dry, warm pot is better.

Use Boiling Water

If you are making tea for several people, use more than one tea bag.
Two will go quite a long way I've found, and—as you will see—there is no waste. When you are making the tea use actually boiling water, straight from the kettle. Take the pot right up to the kettle and do not wait for the bubbling to die down.
Let it sizzle down on to the teabags;
then pop the lid on the pot and leave it for a minute or two, preferably under a tea-cosy. That keeps the whole thing piping hot.

After that little interval, when the fluid is dark and strong enough, take the teabags out and put them aside to drain. This does away with "stewed" tea—and possibly the chance of indigestion. Those once-used teabags can go into the pot later on, for another brewing, helped out with a fresh bag.

I am sure you will find this method both an improvement and a great saving. And don't laugh at the tea-cosy notion, for you'll soon wonder why you never used one before. Tea tepid from the pot is nasty stuff, far too suggestive of a half-warm dinner.
You can make a very practical cosy out of two semi-circles of double cotton batting, lined and covered with material and then fastened together along the curved portions. Your tea pot will stand very snugly under this hat-like arrangement, and you can make it any good color scheme to tone with your china. Just one thing: beware of a hot teapot handle! So here's to happier teatimes and faster tea.

Lost In Blackout

I asked my visitor from Ontario to tell me what folks like to read about in such letters as these. "The blackout, for one thing," he answered.
Well, until a fortnight ago I imagined I had said all there was to say about the blackout—but I was wrong.
For the first time I have been lost, really and truly lost, in one. And in my own road, though you may find it hard to believe. Perhaps you fancy that you know your own road like the back of your hand, but a moonless, misty blackout night soon puts you right on that.

When I set off for my friend's house, not more than five minutes' walk away, it was dark. When I came away a couple of hours later, I stepped into a chilly, dank, lightless void. I could not even catch one glimpse of the trees' silhouette a-gath at the sky. It was like stumbling over the edge of the world. I had a walking-stick with me, and a falling torch; and I assure you that a falling torch seems worse than no torch at all; but batteries have now joined the ranks of the Rarely-if-Ever, so there it was.

Waving my stick in front of me, I moved over the road, heading for the grass verge. That, I said, would be a help. But, crazy though it sounds, I must have taken a curve on that wide road. The grass verge seemed unusually high and had developed unexpected curves, but on I plodded. The truth of the matter was that I was pawing my way in the wrong direction, and after nearly half an hour of peering at gate numbers (when there were any) I thought I must have gone clean crazy. The whole district seemed as still and black as the grave, and there wasn't a creature to be seen. I did not like the notion of opening somebody's gate and inquiring, for there was the chance of falling headlong into a bush or having an encounter, perhaps, with an agitated dog. To cut the story short, I eventually arrived home, dazed and towseled, as well I might be, having taken well over forty minutes in making port.

Ticked By Confidences

The visitor was amused by that melancholy story and, having seen our blackout, he knew it was true.
He was also tickled by my confidences concerning my latest personal A.
R.P. You see, we have no shelter at all in this house; even the ladder under the stairs is nearly all glass, and glass is a horror when anything happens.

So every night, when I go to bed,
I make up a sort of secondary bed underneath, on the floor, with a couple of rugs and a pillow. "I only hope," I told him, "that I could make the move in time, if I happened to hear anything whizzing down." (Many a person has been saved, incidentally, by dodging under a bed or a table.) He was very comforting.

It's surprising how quick you can move when there's a bomb coming," he replied; and maybe he's right.

I know one of four girls who, hearing that whining whistle during an alert, dodged under the office table.
They all crawled out without a scratch—but the rest of the room—and most of the house—simply wasn't there any more. May I be equally agile if my turn comes.

Another friend of mine, whose home was in London, and whose husband was working in this part, came down with her son to spend a week with him. On the Sunday morning she amused herself—and her husband —by reading aloud his birthday horoscope, which said that he was going to get "good news to his financial advantage."

"What bosh it all is!" he said scornfully; and there and then a telegram arrived to say that their London house had received a direct hit. After that, needless to say, he was more sober than ever. It is an old story now, but we are still grinning over it. Yet perhaps the horoscope-merchant was more truthful than he knew, for there was an uncanny suggestion of 'good news' in that extraordinary escape, wasn't there. It was a pity he mentioned financial advantage, for they lost everything except a sideboard—and the suitcases they had with them. For all that, the remembrance of that bit of reading adds an edge to their humor, and so long as you have humor you've got quite a lot.

CHAPTER No. 1

You've got to be a fellow who has come out of our country to get the drift of what I'm going to tell you because if you haven't been around to watch the sun a-setting over the foothills you won't know how it will set a fellow to thinking.

For two years I've been working on a ranch in the foothills and I wouldn't trade my spot for any in the country.

The other night was just like any other. We'd had a hard day rounding up strays in the bush and now we were headed home ward. In some of the coulees a little snow still hung—a dirty white—but generally it was spring, and the sun during the day was warm and pleasant.

Now as the purple shadows were starting to drift back from the hills, and the sun dropped behind the Rockies, I watched the dogies drifting down the coulee and sat back to roll myself a smoke.

Right then I got to thinking. Maybe I'd been listening to too many of these news broadcasts telling of war and such, but as I looked out over the hills I got to figuring that maybe I wasn't doing my part in it at all.

I got to thinking that life out west was just about tops, but if those goose-stepping so-and-so's from across the pond ever got over here I'd probably find myself with a lot tougher task than riding herd, doing a little fencing, and topping off a few tough broncs.

I figure that those fellows who have been making it tough for the Allies rate in about the same class as a bunch of flea-bitten coyotes, and about the best thing for a fellow to do is help clean out the whole pack of them, pronto.

Cavalry Would Do

Right now, I figure, I'm just about the right age to make a fighting man, but I sure wish those bosses in ing with you. There's a job to be done in the Army alright and the sooner it's done the better. We can sure use you here but the Army needs you more. When it's all over just high-away for a spell doing a little job. I guess you're going to have a life of ease while I'm away, but one of these days we'll get together again.

You'd think he knew what I was talking about because he looks at me, whinnies softly and rubs his muzzle on my sleeve.

I leave pronto and don't look back, but as I round the barn I hear him trot to the corner of the corral and whinny again.

Plenty of Pay
I go up to the house to see the boss to draw what little pay I've got coming. He takes a look in the pay book and then he counts out quite a wad of bills.

"Boss," I tell him, "You've got it figured up wrong. I've got nowhere near that coming."

He just grins and says, "Well, I sort of figure you have. I'm giving you a couple of months salary extra because I'm mighty proud to have one of my boys in the Army, especially when I haven't a son of my own to go."

After that he drives me out to our station to catch the train, but on the way he pulls up in front of the school house and says, "I think you have a little job to do here. I'll be waiting."

I go up and rap on the school house door and Miss Edith looks considerable surprised when she sees it's me. I tell her I'm headed to Calgary to join the Army.

Right off she tells the class that it's recess, and they go piling out into the yard.

"Johnny," she says, "I don't want to see you go but I'm proud of you. I'll write to you all the time. Good luck."

Then she puts her hands on my shoulders and kisses me.

I guess I'm blushing a little as I leave the school house and I'm no the Army hadn't got the mechanized bee, because I'd be right at home in a cavalry unit.

I sit thinking so long that I get right down to the end of my fig, and after a last drag 'but' it on the saddle horn and start out after the boys with the herd.

It's getting right dusk but on a head I can hear the cattle and in no time at all I catch up.

Well, I'm pretty quiet on the way in because I've got a powerful lot of things to figure out. When we hit the cook-shack it's just the same, and because I'm not holding up my end in the conversation the boys start to rib me.

"Bet he's got a girl," the Swede grins, and that starts things going and the boys really kid me, naming everyone from the schoolma'm to the boss' niece.

Finally I get around to telling them that I guess I'll be pulling stakes on account of a new job I've got lined up.

Just then the boss comes in and hears me.

"What's the matter, Johnny?" he asks. "You're getting good pay and the work isn't too hard. What's eating to miss the gang."

Well, finally I get my stuff packed away and I go over to the corral where my paint horse is looking over the gate. He just can't figure out how all the others have left and he's still there.

He whinnies as he sees me coming and I walk right up and rub his ear. "Pal," I tell him, "I'm going to be I figure, too, that things are going to be mighty different in the Army, because it'll all be new to me and I won't have any of my buddies around."

Finally I do get to sleep and first thing I'm dreaming of tanks and a rip-roaring fight.

Things are just going mighty fine in the battle when Swede yanks the blankets off me, and with a grin, says, "Johnny, you sure better be mending your ways. They ain't agoin' to let you sleep like that in the Army."

Good Luck, Boy
"Good luck, boy," he finishes and shakes my hand and leaves.

Right away all the other boys come over and slap me on the back, and I feel pretty proud that I've finally figured out something that makes everybody feel good.

That night, after we turn in, I can't get to sleep for thinking of lots of things. It isn't going to be too easy leaving this life of mine, and then, too, the boys weren't all wrong when they were kidding about the schoolma'm. She and I have been getting along right well at the dances and I am already figuring that if I save my money for a couple of years I'll be able to have a little place of my own and maybe a wife and family.

ing you?"

So I tell him I figure it's about time I joined the Army.

Right off he comes around the table and puts his hand on my shoulder.

"Son," he says, "I'm mighty glad that you've figured things out that way. I was over last time. That's how I got that limp so I can't be rid-sooner out in the yard than freckle-faced Jimmy Henry yells "Johnny loves teacher."

I'm feeling so happy I want to say, "Sure, so what?" but I just grin and pile into the car.

As we reach the top of the hill I look back and there is Miss Edith on the school-house steps a-waving to me. I wave my hat and the car takes us over the rise.

I figure that just about marks the cross-roads where I'm leaving my old life behind, and starting a brand new one—in the Army.

"I'm giving you a couple of months salary extra."

Now that summer is nearly over, everyone is beginning to think about fall and wonder about our old friends who have been off the air for the summer.

Jack Benny, who spent his summer putting on shows for the boys in the services all over the United States, will continue with this very fine work for another month, and will be back on CJCA at the usual time of 5:53:30 about October 3.

The Happy Gang, who are now on a well-earned vacation, should be back to greet their many listeners on September 13th, over CJCA at the usual time of 11:15-11:45.

Everyone's friends from Wistful Vista, Fibber and Molly McGee, will be returning before very long, but as yet we are unable to give you the exact date, however, their replacement, is very worthy of your listening time. We'll be seeing you at Wistful Vista in the fall.

Have you ever heard of anyone living for 500 years? You will if you listen to this week's offering of "The Weird Circle". It is Bulwer-Lytton's famous tale, "The House and the Brain", the fantastic story of a man who was able to lengthen the span of his own life 500 years, and wield his magnificent powers to call back the dead from the world beyond. This outstanding series of mystery classics titled "The Weird Circle" is heard over CJCA every Wednesday night from 9:30-10 p.m.

At a re-union of relatives at the Jack Chynoweth home on Sunday last, guests were present from Port Arthur and points in Saskatchewan, as well as from around this district.

Mr. W. Fox of Round Valley, Alta., gave us a call while here on a visit this week for a short holiday.

Mrs. Ed. Chynoweth and son Don, and Mrs. Clarence Chynoweth motored up from Coleville, Sask., on Friday to visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Chynoweth and other relatives in the district.
